

N.Y.S.D. Case #
15-cv-5916(RMB)

In the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit

August Term, 2015

No. 15-2801 (L), No. 15-2805 (CON)

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE MANAGEMENT COUNCIL,
Plaintiff-Counter-Defendant-Appellant,

and

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE,
Defendant-Appellant,

v.

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE PLAYERS ASSOCIATION, on its own behalf and on behalf of Tom Brady,
Defendant-Counter-Claimant-Appellee,

and

TOM BRADY,
*Counter-Claimant-Appellee.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York.
Nos. 15-5916, 15-1982 (RMB) — Richard M. Berman, Judge.

* The Clerk of Court is directed to amend the caption as set forth above.

USDC SDNY
DOCUMENT
ELECTRONICALLY FILED
DOC #:
DATE FILED: April 25, 2016

Argued: March 3, 2016

Decided: April 25, 2016

Before: KATZMANN, Chief Judge, PARKER and CHIN, Circuit Judges.

Appeal from a judgment of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York (Richard M. Berman, Judge). Following an investigation, the National Football League imposed a four-game suspension on New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady. The suspension was based on a finding that he participated in a scheme to deflate footballs used during the 2015 American Football Conference Championship Game to a pressure below the permissible range. Brady requested arbitration and League Commissioner Roger Goodell, serving as arbitrator, entered an award confirming the discipline. The parties sought judicial review and the district court vacated the award based upon its finding of fundamental unfairness and lack of notice. The League has appealed.

We hold that the Commissioner properly exercised his broad discretion under the collective bargaining agreement and that his procedural rulings were properly grounded in that agreement and did not deprive Brady of fundamental fairness. Accordingly, we REVERSE the judgment of the district court and REMAND with instructions to confirm the award.

Chief Judge Katzmman dissents in a separate opinion.

PAUL D. CLEMENT (Erin E. Murphy, Michael H. McGinley, on the brief), Bancroft PLLC, Washington, D.C.; Daniel L. Nash, Pratik A. Shah,

1 Stacey R. Eisenstein, Gregory W. Knopp & James
2 E. Tysse, Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld LLP, 3 Washington, D.C., on the brief, for Plaintiff-Counter-
4 Defendant-Appellant and Defendant-Appellant.

5 JEFFREY L. KESSLER (David L. Greenspan, on the 6 brief), Winston & Strawn LLP, New York, NY;
7 Steffen N. Johnson, Winston & Strawn LLP,
8 Washington, D.C., on the brief; Andrew S.
9 Tulumello, Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, 10 Washington, D.C., on the brief, for Defendant-
11 Counter-Claimant-Appellee and Counter-Claimant-
12 Appellee.

13
14 BARRINGTON D. PARKER, Circuit Judge:

15 This case involves an arbitration arising from New England 16 Patriots quarterback Tom Brady's involvement in a scheme to 17 deflate footballs used during the 2015 American Football Conference 18 Championship Game to a pressure below the permissible range.
19 Following an investigation, the NFL suspended Brady for four 20 games. Brady requested arbitration and League Commissioner 21 Roger Goodell, serving as arbitrator, entered an award confirming 22 the discipline. The parties sought judicial review and the district 23 court vacated the award, reasoning that Brady lacked notice that his 24 conduct was prohibited and punishable by suspension, and that the 25 manner in which the proceedings were conducted deprived him of 26 fundamental fairness. The League has appealed and we now 27 reverse.

28 The basic principle driving both our analysis and our 29 conclusion is well established: a federal court's review of labor 30 arbitration awards is narrowly circumscribed and highly 31 deferential—indeed, among the most deferential in the law. Our

1 role is not to determine for ourselves whether Brady participated in 2 a scheme to deflate footballs or whether the suspension imposed by 3 the Commissioner should have been for three games or five games
4 or none at all. Nor is it our role to second-guess the arbitrator's 5 procedural rulings. Our obligation is limited to determining 6 whether the arbitration proceedings and award met the minimum
7 legal standards established by the Labor Management Relations Act, 8 29 U.S.C. § 141 et seq. (the "LMRA"). We must simply ensure that 9 the arbitrator was "even arguably construing or applying the 10 contract and acting within the scope of his authority" and did not 11 "ignore the plain language of the contract." United Paperworks Int'l 12 Union v. Misco, Inc., 484 U.S. 29, 38 (1987). These standards do not 13 require perfection in arbitration awards. Rather, they dictate that 14 even if an arbitrator makes mistakes of fact or law, we may not 15 disturb an award so long as he acted within the bounds of his 16 bargained-for authority.

17 Here, that authority was especially broad. The Commissioner 18 was authorized to impose discipline for, among other things, 19 "conduct detrimental to the integrity of, or public confidence, in the 20 game of professional football." In their collective bargaining 21 agreement, the players and the League mutually decided many 22 years ago that the Commissioner should investigate possible rule 23 violations, should impose appropriate sanctions, and may preside at 24 arbitrations challenging his discipline. Although this tripartite 25 regime may appear somewhat unorthodox, it is the regime
26 bargained for and agreed upon by the parties, which we can only 27 presume they determined was mutually satisfactory.

28 Given this substantial deference, we conclude that this case is 29 not an exceptional one that warrants vacatur. Our review of the 30 record yields the firm conclusion that the Commissioner properly 31 exercised his broad discretion to resolve an intramural controversy 32 between the League and a player. Accordingly, we REVERSE the

1 judgment of the district court and REMAND with instructions to 2 confirm the award.¹

3 BACKGROUND

4 On January 18, 2015, the New England Patriots and the 5 Indianapolis Colts played in the American Football Conference
6 Championship Game at the Patriots' home stadium in Foxborough, 7 Massachusetts to determine which team would advance to Super 8 Bowl XLIX. During the second quarter, Colts linebacker D'Qwell 9 Jackson intercepted a pass thrown by Brady and took the ball to the 10 sideline, suspecting it might be inflated below the allowed minimum 11 pressure of 12.5 pounds per square inch. After confirming that the 12 ball was underinflated, Colts personnel informed League officials, 13 who decided to test all of the game balls at halftime. Eleven other 14 Patriots balls and four Colts balls were tested using two air gauges, 15 one of which had been used before the game to ensure that the balls 16 were inflated within the permissible range of 12.5 to 13.5 psi. While 17 each of the four Colts balls tested within the permissible range on at 18 least one of the gauges, all eleven of the Patriots balls measured 19 below 12.5 psi on both.

20 On January 23, the National Football League announced that it 21 had retained Theodore V. Wells, Jr., Esq., and the law firm of Paul, 22 Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison to conduct an independent 23 investigation into whether there had been improper ball tampering
24 before or during the game. That investigation culminated in a 139-
25 page report released on May 6, which concluded that it was "more 26 probable than not" that two Patriots equipment officials—Jim 27 McNally and John Jastremski—had "participated in a deliberate

¹ We affirm the district court's denial of Michelle McGuirk's motion to intervene, No. 1:15-cv-05916-RMB-JCF, ECF No. 90, in a summary order filed simultaneously with this Opinion. Below and on appeal, McGuirk offers no explanation of her right or need to intervene, beyond a desire to prevent "fraud" on the court. The relevant Federal Rules of Civil and Appellate Procedure do not permit parties with a mere academic interest in a litigation to insert themselves into the dispute.

1 effort to release air from Patriots game balls after the balls were 2 examined by the referee.” Joint App. at 97.² Specifically, the Report
3 found that McNally had removed the game balls from the Officials
4 Locker Room shortly before the game, in violation of standard 5 protocol, and taken them to a single-toilet bathroom, where he 6 locked the door and used a needle to deflate the Patriots footballs
7 before bringing them to the playing field.

8 In addition to videotape evidence and witness interviews, the 9 investigation team examined text messages exchanged between 10 McNally and Jastremski in the months leading up to the AFC
11 Championship Game. In the messages, the two discussed Brady’s 12 stated preference for less-inflated footballs. McNally also referred to 13 himself as “the deflator” and quipped that he was “not going to 14 espn . . . yet,” and Jastremski agreed to provide McNally with a 15 “needle” in exchange for “cash,” “newkicks,” and memorabilia 16 autographed by Brady. Joint App. at 99–102. The Report also relied 17 on a scientific study conducted by Exponent, an engineering and 18 scientific consulting firm, which found that the underinflation could 19 not “be explained completely by basic scientific principles, such as 20 the Ideal Gas Law,” particularly since the average pressure of the 21 Patriots balls was significantly lower than that of the Colts balls.
22 Joint App. at 104–08. Exponent further concluded that a reasonably 23 experienced individual could deflate thirteen footballs using a 24 needle in well under the amount of time that McNally was in the 25 bathroom.³

26 The investigation also examined Brady’s potential role in the 27 deflation scheme. Although the evidence of his involvement was 28 “less direct” than that of McNally’s or Jastremski’s, the Wells Report 29 concluded that it was “more probable than not” that Brady had been

² The Report assessed the evidence under the “more probable than not” standard, which applies to violations of this kind.

³ The Wells Report concluded that the evidence did not establish that any other Patriots personnel participated in or had knowledge of these actions.

1 “at least generally aware” of McNally and Jastremski’s actions, and 2 that it was “unlikely that an equipment assistant and a locker room
3 attendant would deflate game balls without Brady’s” “knowledge,” 4 “approval,” “awareness,” and “consent.” Joint App. at 112, 114.
5 Among other things, the Report cited a text message exchange
6 between McNally and Jastremski in which McNally complained 7 about Brady and threatened to overinflate the game balls, and 8 Jastremski replied that he had “[t]alked to [Tom] last night” and 9 “[Tom] actually brought you up and said you must have a lot of 10 stress trying to get them done.” Joint App. at 112. The investigators 11 also observed that Brady was a “constant reference point” in 12 McNally and Jastremski’s discussions about the scheme, Joint App.
13 at 112, had publicly stated his preference for less-inflated footballs in 14 the past, and had been “personally involved in [a] 2006 rule change 15 that allowed visiting teams to prepare game balls in accordance with 16 the preferences of their quarterbacks,” Joint App. at 114.

17 Significantly, the Report also found that, after more than six 18 months of not communicating by phone or message, Brady and 19 Jastremski spoke on the phone for approximately 25 minutes on 20 January 19, the day the investigation was announced. This unusual 21 pattern of communication continued over the next two days. Brady 22 had also taken the “unprecedented step” on January 19 of inviting 23 Jastremski to the quarterback room, and had sent Jastremski several 24 text messages that day that were apparently designed to calm him.
25 The Report added that the investigation had been impaired by 26 Brady’s refusal “to make available any documents or electronic 27 information (including text messages and emails),” notwithstanding 28 an offer by the investigators to allow Brady’s counsel to screen the 29 production. Joint App. at 116.

30 In a letter dated May 11, 2015, NFL Executive Vice President
31 Troy Vincent, Sr., notified Brady that Goodell had authorized a four-32 game suspension of him pursuant to Article 46 of the Collective 33 Bargaining Agreement between the League and the NFL Players

1 Association (the “Association” or the “NFLPA”) for engaging in 2 “conduct detrimental to the integrity of and public confidence in the 3 game of professional football.” Joint App. at 329.⁴ The disciplinary 4 letter cited the Wells Report’s conclusions regarding Brady’s 5 awareness and knowledge of the scheme, as well as his “failure to 6 cooperate fully and candidly with the investigation, including by 7 refusing to produce any relevant electronic evidence (emails, texts, 8 etc.) despite being offered extraordinary safeguards by the 9 investigators to protect unrelated personal information.” Joint App.
10 at 329.

11 Brady, through the Association, filed a timely appeal of the 12 suspension, and the Commissioner exercised his discretion under 13 the CBA to serve as the hearing officer. The Association sought to 14 challenge the factual conclusions of the Wells Report, and also 15 argued that the Commissioner had improperly delegated his 16 authority to discipline players pursuant to the CBA. Prior to the 17 hearing, the Association filed several motions, including a motion to 18 recuse the Commissioner, a motion to compel NFL Executive Vice 19 President and General Counsel Jeff Pash to testify regarding his 20 involvement in the preparation of the Wells Report, and a motion to 21 compel the production of Paul, Weiss’s internal investigation notes.

⁴ Article 46, Section 1(a), reads, in full:

All disputes involving a fine or suspension imposed upon a player for conduct on the playing field (other than as described in Subsection (b) below) or involving action taken against a player by the Commissioner for conduct detrimental to the integrity of, or public confidence in, the game of professional football, will be processed exclusively as follows: the Commissioner will promptly send written notice of his action to the player, with a copy to the NFLPA. Within three (3) business days following such written notification, the player affected thereby, or the NFLPA with the player’s approval, may appeal in writing to the Commissioner.

Joint App. at 345. Article 46 further provides that “the Commissioner may serve as hearing officer in any appeal under Section 1(a) of this Article at his discretion.” Joint App. at 346.

1 The Commissioner denied the motions in decisions issued on 2 June 2 and June 22, 2015. He reasoned that his recusal was not 3 warranted because he did not “delegate [his] disciplinary authority 4 to Mr. Vincent” and did “not have any first-hand knowledge of any 5 of the events at issue.” Special App. at 67–68. The Commissioner 6 also declined to compel Pash’s testimony, saying that Pash did not 7 “play a substantive role in the investigation,” and that the Wells
8 Report made clear that it was “prepared entirely by the Paul Weiss 9 investigative team.” Special App. at 63. The Commissioner offered 10 to revisit his ruling “should the parties present evidence showing 11 that the testimony of [Pash] . . . is necessary for a full and fair 12 hearing,” Special App. at 64, but the Association never asked him to 13 reconsider. As to the Paul, Weiss investigation notes, the 14 Commissioner ruled that the CBA did not require their production 15 and, in any event, the notes played no role in his disciplinary 16 decision.

17 On June 23, the Commissioner held a hearing involving nearly 18 ten hours of sworn testimony and argument and approximately 300
19 exhibits. Shortly before the hearing, it was revealed that on March 20 6—the same day that he was to be interviewed by the Wells
21 investigative team—Brady had “instructed his assistant to destroy 22 the cellphone that he had been using since early November 2014, a 23 period that included the AFC Championship Game and the initial 24 weeks of the subsequent investigation,” despite knowing that the 25 investigators had requested information from the phone several 26 weeks before. Special App. at 42. Although Brady testified that he 27 was following his ordinary practice of disposing of old cell phones 28 in order to protect his personal privacy, he had nonetheless retained 29 phones that he had used before and after the relevant time frame.

30 On July 28, the Commissioner issued a final decision affirming 31 the four-game suspension. Based upon the newly revealed evidence 32 regarding the destruction of the cell phone, the Commissioner found 33 that Brady had not only failed to cooperate with the investigation,

1 but “made a deliberate effort to ensure that investigators would 2 never have access to information that he had been asked to 3 produce.” Special App. at 54. The Commissioner consequently 4 drew an adverse inference that the cell phone would have contained 5 inculpatory evidence, and concluded:

6 (1) Mr. Brady participated in a scheme to tamper with 7 the game balls after they had been approved by the 8 game officials for use in the AFC Championship Game
9 and (2) Mr. Brady willfully obstructed the investigation 10 by, among other things, affirmatively arranging for 11 destruction of his cellphone knowing that it contained 12 potentially relevant information that had been 13 requested by the investigators.

14 Special App. at 54. Finally, the Commissioner analogized Brady’s 15 conduct to that of steroid users, whom he believed seek to gain a 16 similar systematic competitive advantage, and consequently 17 affirmed that, in his view, the four-game suspension typically 18 imposed on first-time steroid users was equally appropriate in this 19 context.

20 The League commenced an action the same day in the United 21 States District Court for the Southern District of New York (Berman, 22 J.), seeking confirmation of the award under the LMRA. The 23 Association brought an action to vacate the award in the United 24 States District Court for the District of Minnesota, which was 25 subsequently transferred to the Southern District.

26 On September 3, the district court issued a decision and order 27 granting the Association’s motion to vacate the award and denying 28 the League’s motion to confirm. Nat’l Football League Mgmt. Council
29 v. Nat’l Football League Players Ass’n, 125 F. Supp. 3d 449 (S.D.N.Y.
30 2015). The court reasoned that Brady lacked notice that he could be 31 suspended for four games because the provisions applicable to his 32 conduct provided that only fines could be imposed. The court also

1 held that the award was defective because the Commissioner 2 deprived Brady of fundamental fairness by denying the 3 Association's motions to compel the production of Paul, Weiss's 4 internal notes and Pash's testimony regarding his involvement with 5 the Wells Report. The League timely appealed, and we now reverse.

6 STANDARD OF REVIEW

7 We review a district court's decision to confirm or vacate an 8 arbitration award de novo on questions of law and for clear error on 9 findings of fact. Wackenhut Corp. v. Amalgamated Local 515, 126 F.3d 10 29, 31 (2d Cir. 1997). Because this dispute involves the assertion of 11 rights under a collective bargaining agreement, our analysis is 12 governed by section 301 of the LMRA. Major League Baseball Players
13 Ass'n v. Garvey, 532 U.S. 504, 509 (2001).

14 The LMRA establishes a federal policy of promoting 15 "industrial stabilization through the collective bargaining 16 agreement," with particular emphasis on private arbitration of 17 grievances. United Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Navigation Co., 363 18 U.S. 574, 578 (1960). The Act embodies a "clear preference for the 19 private resolution of labor disputes without government 20 intervention." Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers v. Niagara Mohawk Power
21 Corp., 143 F.3d 704, 714 (2d Cir. 1998).

22 Under this framework of self-government, the collective 23 bargaining agreement is not just a contract, but "a generalized code 24 to govern a myriad of cases which the draftsmen cannot wholly 25 anticipate." Warrior, 363 U.S. at 578. Collective bargaining 26 agreements are not imposed by legislatures or government agencies.
27 Rather, they are negotiated and refined over time by the parties 28 themselves so as to best reflect their priorities, expectations, and 29 experience. Similarly, the arbitrators are chosen by the parties 30 because of their expertise in the particular business and their trusted 31 judgment to "interpret and apply [the] agreement in accordance 32 with the 'industrial common law of the shop' and the various needs

1 and desires of the parties.” Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co., 415 U.S.
2 36, 53 (1974). The arbitration process is thus “part and parcel of the 3 ongoing process of collective bargaining.” Misco, 484 U.S. at 38.

4 Our review of an arbitration award under the LMRA is, 5 accordingly, “very limited.” Garvey, 532 U.S. at 509. We are 6 therefore not authorized to review the arbitrator’s decision on the 7 merits despite allegations that the decision rests on factual errors or 8 misinterprets the parties’ agreement, but inquire only as to whether 9 the arbitrator acted within the scope of his authority as defined by 10 the collective bargaining agreement. Because it is the arbitrator’s 11 view of the facts and the meaning of the contract for which the 12 parties bargained, courts are not permitted to substitute their own.
13 Misco, 484 U.S. at 37–38. It is the arbitrator’s construction of the 14 contract and assessment of the facts that are dispositive, “however 15 good, bad, or ugly.” Oxford Health Plans LLC v. Sutter, 133 S. Ct.
16 2064, 2071 (2013). Contrary to our dissenting colleague, we do not 17 consider whether the punishment imposed was the most 18 appropriate, or whether we are persuaded by the arbitrator’s 19 reasoning. In short, it is not our task to decide how we would have 20 conducted the arbitration proceedings, or how we would have 21 resolved the dispute.

22 Instead, our task is simply to ensure that the arbitrator was 23 “even arguably construing or applying the contract and acting 24 within the scope of his authority” and did not “ignore the plain 25 language of the contract.” Misco, 484 U.S. at 38. Even failure to 26 “follow arbitral precedent” is no “reason to vacate an award.”
27 Wackenhut, 126 F.3d at 32. As long as the award “‘draws its essence 28 from the collective bargaining agreement’ and is not merely the 29 arbitrator’s ‘own brand of industrial justice,’” it must be confirmed.
30 Niagara Mohawk, 143 F.3d at 714 (quoting United Steelworkers v. Enter.
31 Wheel & Car Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 597 (1960)); see also Garvey, 532 U.S.
32 at 509; 187 Concourse Assocs. v. Fishman, 399 F.3d 524, 527 (2d Cir.

2005).⁵ If the arbitrator acts within the scope of this authority, the remedy for a dissatisfied party “is not judicial intervention,” but “for the parties to draft their agreement to reflect the scope of power they would like their arbitrator to exercise.” United Bhd. of Carpenters v. Tappan Zee Constr., LLC, 804 F.3d 270, 275 (2d Cir. 2015) (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting T.Co Metals, LLC v. Dempsey Pipe & Supply, Inc., 592 F.3d 329, 345 (2d Cir. 2010)). Against this legal backdrop, we turn to the decision below and the arguments advanced on appeal.

DISCUSSION

Article 46 of the CBA empowers the Commissioner to take disciplinary action against a player whom he “reasonably judge[s]” to have engaged in “conduct detrimental to the integrity of, or public confidence in, the game of professional football.” Joint App. at 345, 353.⁶ A disciplined player is entitled to appeal to the Commissioner and seek an arbitration hearing, and the Commissioner may appoint either himself or someone else to serve as arbitrator. Article 46 does not articulate rules of procedure for the hearing, except to provide that “the parties shall exchange copies of any exhibits upon which they intend to rely no later than three (3) calendar days prior to the hearing.” Joint App. at 346.

On this appeal, the Association does not contest the factual findings of the Commissioner. Nor does the Association dispute that the Commissioner was entitled, under Article 46, to determine that Brady’s “participat[ion] in a scheme to tamper with game balls”

⁵ This deferential standard is no less applicable where the industry is a sports association. We do not sit as referees of football any more than we sit as the “umpires” of baseball or the “super-scorer” for stock car racing. Otherwise, we would become mired down in the areas of a group’s activity concerning which only the group can speak competently. See Crouch v. Nat’l Ass’n for Stock Car Auto Racing, Inc., 845 F.2d 397, 403 (2d Cir. 1988); Charles O. Finley & Co., Inc. v. Kuhn, 569 F.2d 527, 536–38 (7th Cir. 1978).

⁶ Players are put on notice of the Commissioner’s Article 46 authority by way of the League Policies for Players and the NFL Player Contract.

1 was “conduct detrimental” worthy of a four-game suspension. The 2 parties disagree, however, as to whether other aspects of the CBA
3 and the relevant case law require vacatur of the award.

4 The district court identified three bases for overturning 5 Brady’s suspension: (1) the lack of adequate notice that deflation of 6 footballs could lead to a four-game suspension, (2) the exclusion of 7 testimony from Pash, and (3) the denial of access to the investigative 8 notes of the attorneys from Paul, Weiss who prepared the Wells 9 Report. We conclude that each of these grounds is insufficient to 10 warrant vacatur and that none of the Association’s remaining 11 arguments have merit.

12 I. Lack of Adequate Notice

13 The parties agree that the “law of the shop” requires the 14 League to provide players with advance notice of “prohibited 15 conduct and potential discipline.” The district court identified 16 several grounds for concluding that Brady had no notice that either 17 his conduct was prohibited or that it could serve as a ground for 18 suspension.

19 A. The Player Policies

20 The Association’s chief ground for vacatur, relied upon by the 21 district court, is that the Commissioner improperly suspended Brady 22 pursuant to the “conduct detrimental” clause of Article 46 because 23 Brady was only on notice that his conduct could lead to a fine under 24 the more specific “Discipline for Game-Related Misconduct” section 25 of the League Policies for Players (the “Player Policies”). These 26 Policies, which are collected in a handbook distributed to all NFL 27 players at the beginning of each season, include a section entitled 28 “Other Uniform/Equipment Violations.”⁷

⁷ The “Other Uniform/Equipment Violations” section reads, in full:

The 2014 Uniform Policy, the 2014 On Field Policy, and the enforcement procedures for these policies are attached at the end of this section.

A League representative will conduct a thorough review of all players in

1 The Association argues that the Commissioner was not 2 permitted to impose a four-game suspension under Article 46
3 because the Player Policies mandated only a fine for equipment 4 infractions. The Association further contends that the award is 5 additionally defective because the Commissioner failed to make 6 findings as to the applicability or interpretation of the Player
7 Policies. See Clinchfield Coal Co. v. Dist. 28, United Mine Workers, 720 8 F.2d 1365, 1369 (4th Cir. 1983) (“Where . . . the arbitrator fails to 9 discuss critical contract terminology, which terminology might 10 reasonably require an opposite result, the award cannot be 11 considered to draw its essence from the contract.”).

12 This argument by the Association has a tortured procedural 13 history. During arbitration, the Association disclaimed the 14 applicability of the Player Policies, saying “we don’t believe this 15 policy applies either, because there is nothing here about the balls.” 16 Joint App. at 956. This change of position is itself grounds for uniform during pregame warm-ups.

All uniform and On Field violations detected during the routine pregame check must be corrected prior to kickoff, or the offending player(s) will not be allowed to enter the game. A violation that occurs during the game will result in the player being removed from the game until the violation is corrected.

League discipline may also be imposed on players whose equipment, uniform, or On Field violations are detected during postgame review of video, who repeat violations on the same game day after having been corrected earlier, or who participate in the game despite not having corrected a violation when instructed to do so. First offenses will result in fines.

In addition, in accordance with Article 51, Section 13(c) of the NFL-NFLPA Collective Bargaining Agreement, all players will be required to wear a non-obtrusive sensor or GPS tracking device during NFL games. League discipline will be imposed on any player who refuses to wear such a device, or after having such a device affixed to his equipment, removes the device prior to or during a game. First offenses will result in fines.

Joint App. at 384.

1 rejecting the Association's argument. See York Research Corp. v.
2 Landgarten, 927 F.2d 119, 122 (2d Cir. 1991) ("[A] party 'cannot 3 remain silent, raising no objection during the course of the 4 arbitration proceeding, and when an award adverse to him has been 5 handed down complain of a situation of which he had knowledge 6 from the first.'" (quoting Cook Indus., Inc. v. C. Itoh & Co. (Am.) Inc., 7 449 F.2d 106, 107–08 (2d Cir. 1971))). We nonetheless exercise our 8 discretion to address it. We conclude that the equipment provision 9 does not apply and, in any event, the punishments listed for 10 equipment violations are minimum ones that do not foreclose 11 suspensions.

12 1. Applicability of the Player Policies

13 The Association primarily relies on a statement in the "Other 14 Uniform/Equipment Violations" section, which provides that "First 15 offenses will result in fines." It argues that equipment violations 16 include "ball or equipment tampering" and "equipment tampering 17 such as ball deflation." But the Association finds language in the 18 "Other Uniform/Equipment Violations" provision that we cannot 19 locate. The provision says nothing about tampering with, or the 20 preparation of, footballs and, indeed, does not mention the words 21 "tampering," "ball," or "deflation" at all. Moreover, there is no
22 other provision of the Player Policies that refers to ball or equipment 23 tampering, despite an extensive list of uniform and equipment
24 violations ranging from the length of a player's stockings to the color 25 of his wristbands.

26 On the other hand, Article 46 gives the Commissioner broad 27 authority to deal with conduct he believes might undermine the 28 integrity of the game. The Commissioner properly understood that 29 a series of rules relating to uniforms and equipment does not repeal 30 his authority vested in him by the Association to protect professional 31 football from detrimental conduct. We have little difficulty in 32 concluding that the Commissioner's decision to discipline Brady 33 pursuant to Article 46 was "plausibly grounded in the parties'

1 agreement,” which is all the law requires. See Wackenhut, 126 F.3d at 2 32.

3 2. 2014 Schedule of Fines

4 Even were the district court and the Association correct, and 5 they are not, that Brady could be punished only pursuant to the 6 Player Policies and its “Other Uniform/Equipment Violations”
7 provision, it would not follow that the only available punishment 8 would have been a fine. While the Player Policies do specify that, 9 with regard to “Other Uniform/Equipment Violations,” “[f]irst 10 offenses will result in fines,” the 2014 Schedule of Fines, which 11 appears five pages later and details the fines for these violations, 12 makes clear that the “[f]ines listed below are minimums.” Joint App.
13 at 384, 389. The Schedule of Fines goes on to specify that “[o]ther 14 forms of discipline, including higher fines and suspension may also 15 be imposed, based on the circumstances of the particular violation.”
16 Joint App. at 389. Read in conjunction, these provisions make clear 17 that even first offenders are not exempt from punishment, and 18 serious violations may result in suspension. But even if other 19 readings were plausible, the Commissioner’s interpretation of this 20 provision as allowing for a suspension would easily withstand 21 judicial scrutiny because his interpretation would be at least “barely 22 colorable,” which, again, is all that the law requires. See In re Andros 23 Compania Maritima, S.A., 579 F.2d 691, 704 (2d Cir. 1978).

24 B. Steroid Comparison

25 The district court also took issue with the comparison drawn
26 by the Commissioner between Brady’s conduct and that of steroid 27 users. In his arbitration award, the Commissioner noted that the 28 four-game suspension typically imposed on first-time steroid users 29 was a helpful point of comparison because, like Brady’s conduct, 30 “steroid use reflects an improper effort to secure a competitive 31 advantage in, and threatens the integrity of, the game.” Special

1 App. at 57. Finding such a comparison inappropriate, the district 2 court held:

3 [N]o player alleged or found to have had a general
4 awareness of the inappropriate ball deflation activities
5 of others or who allegedly schemed with others to let air 6 out of footballs in a championship game and also had 7 not cooperated in an ensuing investigation, reasonably 8 could be on notice that their discipline would (or 9 should) be the same as applied to a player who violated 10 the NFL Policy on Anabolic Steroids and Related 11 Substances.

12 Nat'l Football League, 125 F. Supp. 3d at 465. The Association 13 approaches this comparison somewhat differently, contending that 14 the Commissioner's failure to punish Brady pursuant to the Player
15 Policies "is only underscored by his reliance on the Steroid Policy."
16 Appellees' Br. 45.

17 We are not troubled by the Commissioner's analogy. If 18 deference means anything, it means that the arbitrator is entitled to 19 generous latitude in phrasing his conclusions. We have little 20 difficulty concluding that the comparison to steroid users neither 21 violated a "right" to which Brady was entitled nor deprived him of 22 notice. While he may have been entitled to notice of his range of 23 punishment, it does not follow that he was entitled to advance notice 24 of the analogies the arbitrator might find persuasive in selecting a 25 punishment within that range.

26 The dissent contends that we must vacate the award because 27 the Commissioner failed to discuss a policy regarding "stickum," 28 which the dissent views as "a natural starting point for assessing 29 Brady's penalty." Dissenting Op. at 7. We do not believe this 30 contention is consistent with our obligation to afford arbitrators 31 substantial deference, and by suggesting that the stickum policy is 32 the more appropriate analogy, the dissent improperly weighs in on a

1 pure sports question—whether using stickum by one player is 2 similar to tampering with footballs used on every play. And even if 3 the fine for stickum use is the most appropriate analogy to Brady’s 4 conduct, nothing in the CBA or our case law demands that the 5 arbitrator discuss comparable conduct merely because we find that 6 analogy more persuasive than others, or because we think the 7 analogy the arbitrator chose to draw was “flawed” or “inapt.”⁸ Nor 8 does the CBA require the arbitrator to “fully explain his reasoning,” 9 Dissenting Op. at 6; it merely mandates that the hearing officer
10 render a “written decision,” Joint App. at 346. The Commissioner 11 not only did just that, but he also explained why he found the 12 analogy to steroid use persuasive. Not even the Association finds 13 defect in the award on this point—this argument was never raised 14 by the Association, either below or on appeal. While we appreciate 15 that our dissenting colleague might view the penalty meted out to 16 Brady as harsh, we do not believe that view supplies a sufficient 17 basis to warrant vacatur.

18 Accordingly, we believe the Commissioner was within his 19 discretion in drawing a helpful, if somewhat imperfect, comparison 20 to steroid users. In any event, we believe this issue is much ado 21 about very little because the Commissioner could have imposed the 22 same suspension without reference to the League’s steroid policy.

23 C. General Awareness

24 The district court also concluded that the award was invalid
25 because “[n]o NFL policy or precedent provided notice that a player 26 could be subject to discipline for general awareness of another 27 person’s alleged misconduct.” Nat’l Football League, 125 F. Supp. 3d 28 at 466. This conclusion misapprehends the record. The award is 29 clear that it confirmed Brady’s discipline not because of a general
30 awareness of misconduct on the part of others, but because Brady

⁸ This is especially true here given that, despite knowing that Brady had been suspended four games, the Association never attempted to draw an analogy to the punishment for stickum users.

1 both “participated in a scheme to tamper with game balls” and 2 “willfully obstructed the investigation by . . . arranging for 3 destruction of his cellphone.” Special App. at 54.

4 The Association takes a somewhat different tack and argues
5 that the Commissioner was bound to the Wells Report’s limited 6 conclusion that Brady was at least “generally aware” of the 7 inappropriate activities of Patriots equipment staff. But the 8 Association offers no persuasive support for its contention that the 9 universe of facts the Commissioner could properly consider was 10 limited by the Wells Report. Nothing in Article 46 limits the 11 authority of the arbitrator to examine or reassess the factual basis for 12 a suspension. In fact, in providing for a hearing, Article 46 strongly 13 suggests otherwise. Because the point of a hearing in any 14 proceeding is to establish a complete factual record, it would be 15 incoherent to both authorize a hearing and at the same time insist 16 that no new findings or conclusions could be based on a record 17 expanded as a consequence of a hearing.

18 Additionally, it was clear to all parties that an important goal 19 of the hearing was to afford the Association the opportunity to 20 examine the findings of the Wells Report, and the Association 21 availed itself of that opportunity. See Joint App. at 952 (“[W]e are 22 about to tell you why we thing [sic] the Wells report is wrong”; 23 “[W]e believe you are going to conclude when you hear [Brady’s 24 testimony] that he is not somebody who was responsible for 25 anything”), 953 (“What it turns out is there are so many 26 unknowns which are in the Wells report.”). In light of Brady’s effort 27 to challenge the factual conclusions of the Wells Report by 28 presenting exculpatory evidence, it would make little sense to accept 29 the Association’s contention that the introduction and consideration
30 of inculpatory evidence violates the Commissioner’s broad authority 31 to manage the hearing.

32 The issue before the Commissioner was whether the discipline 33 imposed on Brady was warranted under Article 46, and that was the

1 issue he decided. The Commissioner did not develop a new basis
2 for the suspension, nor did he deprive Brady of an opportunity to 3 confront the case against him. We see nothing in the CBA that 4 suggests that the Commissioner was barred from concluding, based 5 on information generated during the hearing, that Brady's conduct 6 was more serious than was initially believed.

7 Moreover, the Wells Report did not limit itself to a finding of 8 "general awareness." It also found that "it is unlikely that [McNally
9 and Jastremski] would deflate game balls without Brady's 10 knowledge and approval" or that they "would personally and 11 unilaterally engage in such conduct in the absence of Brady's 12 awareness and consent." Joint App. at 114. The Commissioner's 13 shift from "knowledge and approval" to "participation" was not, as 14 the Association argues, a "quantum leap," but was instead a 15 reasonable reassessment of the facts that gave rise to Brady's initial 16 discipline, supplemented by information developed at the hearing.

17 Unprompted by the Association, our dissenting colleague 18 contends that because the Wells Report "never concluded that it was 19 'more probable than not' that the gifts Brady provided were 20 intended as rewards or advance payments for deflating footballs in 21 violation of League Rules," Dissenting Op. at 3, the Commissioner 22 deprived Brady of notice by concluding that he "provided 23 inducements and rewards in support of [the] scheme," Special App.
24 at 51.

25 But the Wells Report was clear that its conclusion was 26 "significantly influenced by the substantial number of 27 communications and events consistent with [its] finding, including 28 that [McNally] . . . received valuable items autographed by Tom 29 Brady the week before the AFC Championship Game." Joint App. at 30 108. With specific regard to Brady's involvement, the Wells Report 31 noted that "Brady [was] a constant reference point in the discussions 32 between McNally and Jastremski about . . . items to be received by 33 McNally." Joint App. at 112–13. And as the dissent admits, the

1 Association questioned Brady at the hearing on this very point, and 2 the Commissioner determined that Brady's testimony was not 3 credible. The record establishes that Brady was on notice from the 4 outset that the Wells Report's conclusions were "significantly 5 influenced" by his providing McNally⁹ with autographed 6 memorabilia, the Association confronted this allegation at the 7 hearing, and the Commissioner rejected Brady's explanation. Brady 8 knew that the factual predicates of his discipline (the text messages, 9 the phone calls, the autographed memorabilia, etc.) would be at 10 issue in the arbitration. That he chose to focus on some more than 11 others simply reflects his own tactical decision as to how to present 12 his case. And again, the Association never put forth this contention, 13 either before us or in the district court below.

14 We therefore find that the Commissioner was within his 15 discretion to conclude that Brady had "participated in a scheme to 16 tamper with game balls." Because the parties agree that such 17 conduct is "conduct detrimental," the district court erred in 18 concluding that the Commissioner's deviation from the Wells
19 Report's finding of general awareness was a ground for vacatur.

20 D. Discipline for Non-cooperation

21 The district court held and the Association contends that 22 Brady's suspension cannot be sustained on the grounds that he 23 obstructed the Commissioner's investigation. The court reasoned 24 that "[n]o player suspension in NFL history has been sustained for 25 an alleged failure to cooperate with—or even allegedly 26 obstructing—an NFL investigation." Nat'l Football League, 125 F.
27 Supp. 3d at 465 (internal quotation marks omitted). The League, on 28 the other hand, argues that not only is the deliberate obstruction of a 29 league investigation "conduct detrimental" within the meaning of 30 Article 46, but also the destruction of the cell phone permitted the ⁹ The Commissioner never referenced the gifts Jastremski received from Brady.

1 Commissioner to draw an adverse inference against Brady that 2 supported the finding that he participated in the deflation scheme.

3 The Association's argument is essentially procedural. The 4 Association does not dispute that the Commissioner properly used 5 the destruction of the cell phone to draw an adverse inference 6 against Brady. In the face of this concession, the Association insists
7 that because the award is invalid in light of the Commissioner's 8 failure to discipline Brady under the Player Policies, the award 9 cannot be salvaged on the alternative theory that Brady could have 10 been suspended for his obstruction of the investigation. Specifically, 11 the Association contends that "once it becomes clear that Brady's 12 non-cooperation led to the adverse inference about ball tampering,
13 it's back to square one: The only penalty of which Brady had notice 14 was the collectively bargained fine for equipment violations." Appellees' Br. 51. This argument fails for the simple reason that, as 15 we have explained, the Player Policies are inapplicable and, in any 16 event, suspensions may be imposed for violations of the League's 17 equipment policies.
18

19 At oral argument, the Association contended, for the first 20 time, that Brady had no notice that the destruction of the cell phone 21 would even be at issue in the arbitration proceeding.¹⁰ Ordinarily, 22 an argument such as this that is not raised in the briefs is waived 23 and thus not appropriate for consideration on appeal. Littlejohn v.
24 City of New York, 795 F.3d 297, 313 n.12 (2d Cir. 2015). However, 25 because the parties discussed this issue at length during oral 26 argument, we exercise our discretion to address it.

27 For a number of reasons, the Association's assertion that 28 Brady lacked notice that the destruction of the cell phone would be

¹⁰ By contrast, in its brief, the Association argued only that "Brady had no notice that he could be suspended for declining to produce his private communications." Appellees' Br. 51. Because the parties agree that the Commissioner properly drew an adverse inference based on the destruction of the cell phone, we need not confront this argument.

1 an issue in the arbitration has no support in the record. The 2 League's letter to Brady notifying him of his suspension pointed to 3 Brady's "failure to cooperate fully and candidly with the 4 investigation, including by refusing to produce any relevant 5 electronic evidence (emails, texts, etc.)." Joint App. at 329. Having 6 been given clear notice that his cooperation with the investigation 7 was a subject of significant interest, we have difficulty believing that 8 either Brady or the Association would have been surprised that the 9 destruction of the cell phone was of importance to the 10 Commissioner. The notion that Brady was unfairly blindsided by 11 the Commissioner's adverse inference is further belied by the 12 opening statement of the Association's counsel at the arbitration, 13 who defended Brady's handling of electronic evidence:

14 We are also going to put in a 15 declaration from a forensic person who 16 dealt with the issue of e-mail and texts.
17 And you know from your decision that 18 [this] was an aspect of the discipline. . . .

19

20 [T]here were no incriminating texts
21 being withheld or e-mails, and there never 22 have been any incriminating texts or e-23 mails. And now he has gone through and 24 produces exactly what Ted Wells had asked 25 for at the time that existed at the time and 26 exists today.

27 . . . He was following the advice of 28 his lawyers and agents at the time.

29 Joint App. at 953. Counsel for the Association later went further, 30 directly acknowledging the destruction of the cell phone and 31 referencing an expert declaration submitted in support of Brady.
32 Whatever it may say now about its expectations for the hearing, the

1 Association had at least enough notice of the potential consequences 2 of the cell phone destruction to retain an expert in advance of the 3 arbitration to assist counsel in explaining why an adverse inference 4 should not be drawn.

5 At oral argument, the Association further contended that the 6 Commissioner was improperly punishing Brady for destroying his 7 cell phone because he was required to institute a new disciplinary 8 action (so that Brady could then appeal any determination that he 9 had destroyed his cell phone). This argument fails because, as set 10 forth in the original disciplinary letter, Brady was punished for 11 failing to cooperate, and it is clear from the Commissioner's decision 12 that Brady's cell phone destruction was part and parcel of the 13 broader claim that he had failed to cooperate. Further, as we stated 14 with regard to general awareness, nothing in Article 46 limits the 15 arbitrator's authority to reexamine the factual basis for a suspension 16 by conducting a hearing. Additionally, the Commissioner did not 17 increase the punishment as a consequence of the destruction of the 18 cell phone—the four-game suspension was not increased. Rather, 19 the cell phone destruction merely provided further support for the 20 Commissioner's determination that Brady had failed to cooperate, 21 and served as the basis for an adverse inference as to his 22 participation in the scheme to deflate footballs.

23 Finally, any reasonable litigant would understand that the 24 destruction of evidence, revealed just days before the start of 25 arbitration proceedings, would be an important issue. It is well 26 established that the law permits a trier of fact to infer that a party 27 who deliberately destroys relevant evidence the party had an 28 obligation to produce did so in order to conceal damaging 29 information from the adjudicator. See, e.g., Residential Funding Corp.
30 v. DeGeorge Fin. Corp., 306 F.3d 99, 106–07 (2d Cir. 2002); Byrnie v.
31 Town of Cromwell, 243 F.3d 93, 107–12 (2d Cir. 2001); Kronisch v.
32 United States, 150 F.3d 112, 126 (2d Cir. 1998). These principles are 33 sufficiently settled that there is no need for any specific mention of 1 them in a collective agreement, and we are confident that their 2 application came as no surprise to Brady or the Association.

3 E. Competitive Integrity Policy

4 The final ground for vacatur due to inadequate notice
5 identified by the district court was Brady's purported lack of notice 6 of the Competitive Integrity Policy, which authorized the initial 7 investigation. The district court reasoned that Brady was 8 improperly suspended pursuant to the Competitive Integrity Policy, 9 which is distributed only to teams, and not to players. This 10 conclusion is incorrect because, as we have seen, Article 46 properly 11 supplied the basis for the suspension.

12 Tellingly, the Association does not defend the district court's 13 analysis on appeal. The League in its initial punishment and the 14 Commissioner in his arbitration award were both clear that Brady 15 was being disciplined pursuant to Article 46, not the Competitive
16 Integrity Policy.¹¹ The Competitive Integrity Policy, which says 17 nothing about disciplining players, merely supplied the 18 Commissioner with the authority to conduct an investigation and to 19 require the Patriots' cooperation. The operative question for notice, 20 as the parties agree, is whether Brady was aware that his conduct 21 could give rise to a suspension. Article 46 put him on notice prior to 22 the AFC Championship Game that any action deemed by the 23 Commissioner to be "conduct detrimental" could lead to his 24 suspension.¹²

¹¹ See Joint App. at 329–30 (explaining twice that the source of the discipline was the Commissioner's authority under "Article 46 of the CBA"); Special App. at 58–59 n.19 ("As the discipline letter makes clear, Mr. Brady was suspended for conduct detrimental to the integrity of and public confidence in the game of professional football, not for a violation of the [Competitive Integrity Policy].").

¹² The dissent emphasizes at various points that Brady's four-game suspension was "unprecedented." E.g., Dissenting Op. at 1, 6, 9. But determining the severity of a penalty is an archetypal example of a judgment committed to an arbitrator's discretion. The severity of a penalty will depend on any number of considerations, including the culpability of the individual, the circumstances of the misconduct, and the balancing of interests inherently unique in every work environment. Weighing and applying these

1 II. Exclusion of Testimony from NFL General Counsel

2 Prior to the commencement of arbitration proceedings, the 3 Commissioner denied the Association’s motion to call NFL General 4 Counsel Jeff Pash to testify at the arbitration concerning his role in 5 the preparation of the Wells Report. The Commissioner did so on 6 the grounds that Pash did not “play a substantive role in the 7 investigation” and the Wells Report made clear that it was 8 “prepared entirely by the Paul Weiss investigative team.” Special 9 App. at 63. As an independent ground for vacatur, the district court 10 held that it was fundamentally unfair to exclude Pash from 11 testifying because “it is logical that he would have valuable insight 12 into the course and outcome of the Investigation and into the 13 drafting and content of the Wells Report.” Nat’l Football League, 125 14 F. Supp. 3d at 471. Again, we cannot agree with this conclusion.

15 It is well settled that procedural questions that arise during 16 arbitration, such as which witnesses to hear and which evidence to 17 receive or exclude, are left to the sound discretion of the arbitrator 18 and should not be second-guessed by the courts. Misco, 484 U.S. at 19 40. Arbitrators do not “need to comply with strict evidentiary 20 rules,” and they possess “substantial discretion to admit or exclude 21 evidence.” LJL 33rd St. Assocs., LLC v. Pitcairn Props. Inc., 725 F.3d 22 184, 194–95 (2d Cir. 2013); see also Volt Info. Scis., Inc. v. Bd. of Trs. of 23 Leland Stanford Junior Univ., 489 U.S. 468, 476 (1989).

24 However, a narrow exception exists under the Federal 25 Arbitration Act (“FAA”), which provides that an award may be 26 vacated where “the arbitrators were guilty of misconduct . . . in 27 refusing to hear evidence pertinent and material to the controversy.”
28 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(3). We have held that vacatur is warranted in such a 29 circumstance only if “fundamental fairness is violated.” Tempo Shain 30 Corp. v. Bertek, Inc., 120 F.3d 16, 20 (2d Cir. 1997).¹³ There is little factors is left not to the courts, but to the sound discretion of the arbitrator.

¹³ The FAA does not apply to arbitrations, like this one, conducted pursuant to the LMRA, “but the federal courts have often looked to the [FAA] for guidance in labor

1 question that the exclusion of the testimony was consistent with the 2 Commissioner's broad authority to regulate procedural matters and 3 comported with the CBA. Thus, the Commissioner's ruling can be 4 revisited in court only if it violated fundamental fairness, and we see 5 no such violation.

6 The central issue in the arbitration was whether Brady had 7 engaged in conduct detrimental to the League. The "insights" Pash 8 might have had and the role he might have played in the 9 preparation of the Wells Report were concerns that were collateral to 10 the issues at arbitration. The CBA does not require an independent 11 investigation, and nothing would have prohibited the Commissioner 12 from using an in-house team to conduct the investigation. The 13 Association and the League bargained for and agreed in the CBA on 14 a structure that lodged responsibility for both investigation and 15 adjudication with the League and the Commissioner. Moreover, the 16 Commissioner made clear that the independence of the Wells Report 17 was not material to his decision, thus limiting any probative value 18 the Pash testimony may have had.

arbitration cases." Misco, 484 U.S. at 40 n.9. However, we have never held that the requirement of "fundamental fairness" applies to arbitration awards under the LMRA, cf. Bell Aerospace Co. Div. of Textron, Inc. v. Local 516 Int'l Union, 500 F.2d 921, 923 (2d Cir. 1974) (applying, without explanation, 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(3) (formerly § 10(c)) to an arbitration under the LMRA), and we note that the circuits are divided on this question, compare Lippert Tile Co., Inc. v. Int'l Union of Bricklayers, 724 F.3d 939, 948 (7th Cir. 2013) ("[LMRA] review simply does not include a free-floating procedural fairness standard absent a showing that some provision of the CBA was violated."), with Carpenters 46 N. Cal. Ctys. Conference Bd. v. Zcon Builders, 96 F.3d 410, 413 (9th Cir. 1996) ("Although deference must be given to an arbitrator's decisions concerning procedural issues, it is generally recognized that the courts may consider a claim that a party to an arbitration has been denied a fundamentally fair hearing."). While the League does not explicitly dispute the applicability of the "fundamental fairness" standard here, it also does not contest the Association's arguments regarding fundamental unfairness, and instead only argues that the Commissioner's procedural rulings did not violate the terms of the CBA. Regardless of which position we adopt, our result is the same, and thus we need not decide whether the "free-floating procedural fairness standard" of the FAA ought to be imported to our review of arbitrations conducted pursuant to the LMRA.

1 In any event, the Commissioner did receive extensive 2 testimony from Troy Vincent regarding the initiation of the 3 investigation and its initial stages, and from Theodore Wells
4 regarding the investigation itself and the preparation of the report.
5 All of this is compounded by the fact that when initially denying the 6 Association's request to call Pash, the Commissioner noted that 7 "should the parties present evidence showing that the testimony of a 8 witness . . . is necessary for a full and fair hearing," he would be 9 willing to "revisit the NFLPA's motion to compel [the] testimony."
10 Special App. at 64. The Association never renewed its objection or 11 further pursued the issue. We thus conclude that the 12 Commissioner's decision to exclude the testimony fits comfortably 13 within his broad discretion to admit or exclude evidence and raises 14 no questions of fundamental fairness.

15 III. Denial of Access to Investigative Files

16 The district court's third and final ground for vacatur is that 17 Brady was entitled under the CBA to the interview notes and 18 memoranda generated by the investigative team from Paul, Weiss, 19 and that the denial of those notes amounted to fundamental 20 unfairness. The League argues that this is not a ground for vacatur 21 because the CBA does not require the exchange of such notes.

22 We agree. Article 46 specifies that "[i]n appeals under Section 23 1(a), the parties shall exchange copies of any exhibits upon which 24 they intend to rely." Joint App. at 346. The Commissioner 25 reasonably interpreted this provision to not require more extensive 26 discovery. Significantly, the parties agreed in the CBA to permit 27 more comprehensive discovery in other proceedings, such as those 28 under Article 15, Section 3, which allows "reasonable and expedited 29 discovery upon the application of any party." Special App. at 65.

30 The Commissioner further concluded that Brady was not 31 deprived of fundamental fairness because the Commissioner "did 32 not review any of Paul, Weiss' internal interview notes or any other

1 documents generated by Paul, Weiss other than their final report,” 2 and the League had already “produced all of the NFL documents 3 considered by the investigators.” Special App. at 65. The 4 Commissioner pointed out that the Association had not even 5 “identified any material factual dispute that Paul, Weiss’ internal 6 work product would help to resolve.” Special App. at 66.

7 In making these findings, the Commissioner was, at the very 8 least, “arguably construing or applying the contract,” Misco, 484 U.S.
9 at 38, and he reasonably concluded that he would not require the 10 production of attorney work product he had not relied on, or even 11 seen. Had the parties wished to allow for more expansive discovery, 12 they could have bargained for that right. They did not, and there is 13 simply no fundamental unfairness in affording the parties precisely 14 what they agreed on.

15 IV. Additional Issues

16 Because the district court held that Brady was deprived of 17 adequate notice and fundamental fairness, it declined to address the 18 Association’s alternative grounds for vacatur. Although it is our 19 usual practice to allow the district court to address arguments in the 20 first instance, we choose to address the Association’s arguments here 21 because they were fully briefed below and on appeal and because 22 they are meritless. Westerbeke Corp. v. Daihatsu Motor Co., 304 F.3d 23 200, 218 (2d Cir. 2002). Accordingly, we turn to the two remaining 24 arguments advanced on appeal that (1) the Commissioner deprived
25 Brady of fundamental fairness when he denied an evidentiary
26 hearing on the claim that he delegated his authority to discipline
27 Brady to Vincent in violation of the CBA’s grant of exclusive 28 disciplinary authority to the Commissioner, and (2) the 29 Commissioner was evidently partial because he, rather than some 30 neutral third party, decided the delegation issue.¹⁴

¹⁴ In a footnote on the last page of its brief, the Association faults the League for its “failure to employ testing protocols to ensure ‘fair and consistent’ discipline.”
Appellees’ Br. 62 n.13. “We ordinarily deem an argument to be forfeited . . . when it is

1 A. Refusal to Hear Evidence on Delegation

2 The Association contends that Brady was deprived of 3 fundamental fairness when the Commissioner chose not to hear 4 evidence on whether he improperly delegated his disciplinary 5 authority to Vincent in violation of Article 46. The Association
6 offered only two meager pieces of evidence in support. First, it 7 pointed to a press release in which the Commissioner noted that 8 “Troy Vincent and his team will consider what steps to take in light 9 of the [Wells] report.” Joint App. at 1207. Second, it cited the 10 disciplinary letter from the League announcing the four-game 11 suspension, which was sent and signed by Vincent instead of 12 Goodell.

13 The Commissioner adequately explained that he “did not 14 delegate [his] authority as Commissioner to determine conduct 15 detrimental or to impose appropriate discipline.” Special App. at 59.
16 Rather, he “concurred in [Vincent’s] recommendation and 17 authorized him to communicate to . . . Mr. Brady the discipline 18 imposed under [the Commissioner’s] authority.” Special App. at 59.
19 Tellingly, the Commissioner went on to remind the Association that 20 this procedure “ha[d] been employed in numerous disciplinary 21 hearings over the past two decades and ha[d] never before been 22 asserted as a basis for compelling the Commissioner or anyone else 23 to testify in an Article 46 disciplinary proceeding.” Special App. at 24 62.

25 We see no impropriety and certainly no fundamental 26 unfairness because the resolution of this matter fell well within the 27 broad discretion afforded arbitrators. And the allegation lacks merit, 28 as the record is clear that the discipline imposed on Brady was 29 pursuant to the “Commissioner’s authority,” which is what Article 30 46 contemplates. Where a claim is facially deficient, an arbitrator only addressed in a footnote,” City of New York v. Mickalis Pawn Shop, LLC, 645 F.3d 114, 137 (2d Cir. 2011), and hold likewise here.

1 may summarily dismiss it, so long as doing so does not contravene
2 the collective agreement. See Sheldon v. Vermonty, 269 F.3d 1202, 1207
3 (10th Cir. 2001).¹⁵ If it is seriously believed that these procedures 4 were deficient or prejudicial, the remedy was to address them
5 during collective bargaining. Had the parties wished to otherwise 6 limit the arbitrator's authority, they could have negotiated terms to 7 do so.

8 B. Evident Partiality

9 The Association's final contention is that the Commissioner 10 was evidently partial with regard to the delegation issue and should 11 have recused himself from hearing at least that portion of the 12 arbitration because it was improper for him to adjudicate the 13 propriety of his own conduct. This argument has no merit.

14 We may vacate an arbitration award "where there was evident
15 partiality . . . in the arbitrator[]." 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(2).¹⁶ "Evident 16 partiality may be found only 'where a reasonable person would 17 have to conclude that an arbitrator was partial to one party to the 18 arbitration.'" Scandinavian Reins. Co. v. Saint Paul Fire & Marine Ins.
19 Co., 668 F.3d 60, 64 (2d Cir. 2012) (quoting Applied Indus. Materials 20 Corp. v. Ovalar Makine Ticaret Ve Sanayi, A.S., 492 F.3d 132, 137 (2d 21 Cir. 2007)). The party seeking vacatur must prove evident partiality 22 by "clear and convincing evidence." Kolel Beth Yechiel Mechil of 23 Tartikov, Inc. v. YLL Irrevocable Tr., 729 F.3d 99, 106 (2d Cir. 2013).
24 However, arbitration is a matter of contract, and consequently, the ¹⁵ The record strongly suggests that the delegation argument was raised by the Association in order to procure a more favorable arbitrator. See Joint App. at 1120 ("In light of the above, the NFLPA believes that neither Commissioner Goodell nor anyone with close ties to the NFL can serve as arbitrator in Mr. Brady's appeal."). Parties to arbitration have no more right than litigants in court to force recusals by leveling meritless accusations against the decision maker.

¹⁶ As above, we do not pass on whether the FAA's "evident partiality" standard applies to arbitrations under the LMRA. Because the parties did not brief this issue and because the resolution of this case is unaffected, we assume that it does. See supra note 13.

1 parties to an arbitration can ask for no more impartiality than 2 inheres in the method they have chosen. Williams v. Nat'l Football
3 League, 582 F.3d 863, 885 (8th Cir. 2009); Winfrey v. Simmons Foods, 4 Inc., 495 F.3d 549, 551 (8th Cir. 2007).

5 Here, the parties contracted in the CBA to specifically allow 6 the Commissioner to sit as the arbitrator in all disputes brought 7 pursuant to Article 46, Section 1(a). They did so knowing full well 8 that the Commissioner had the sole power of determining what 9 constitutes "conduct detrimental," and thus knowing that the 10 Commissioner would have a stake both in the underlying discipline 11 and in every arbitration brought pursuant to Section 1(a). Had the 12 parties wished to restrict the Commissioner's authority, they could 13 have fashioned a different agreement.

14 CONCLUSION

15 For the foregoing reasons, we REVERSE the judgment of the 16 district court and REMAND with instructions for the district court to 17 confirm the arbitration award.

A True Copy

Catherine O'Hagan Wolfe, Clerk

United States Court of Appeals, Second Circuit

33

 Catherine O'Hagan Wolfe

KATZMANN, Chief Judge, dissenting:

Article 46 of the Collective Bargaining Agreement between the NFL Players Association (the “Association”) and the NFL Management Council requires the Commissioner to provide a player with notice of the basis for any disciplinary action and an opportunity to challenge the discipline in an appeal hearing. When the Commissioner, acting in his capacity as an arbitrator, changes the factual basis for the disciplinary action after the appeal hearing concludes, he undermines the fair notice for which the Association bargained, deprives the player of an opportunity to confront the case against him, and, it follows, exceeds his limited authority under the CBA to decide “appeals” of disciplinary decisions.

In its thorough and thoughtful opinion, the majority does not contest this understanding of the CBA. Instead, it asserts that the Commissioner did not change the factual basis for the discipline and, in effect, that any change was harmless. I cannot agree.

Additionally, on a more fundamental level, I am troubled by the Commissioner’s decision to uphold the unprecedented four-game suspension. The Commissioner failed to even consider a highly relevant alternative penalty and relied, instead, on an inapt analogy to the League’s steroid policy. This deficiency, especially when viewed in combination with the shifting rationale for Brady’s discipline, leaves me to conclude that the Commissioner’s decision reflected “his own brand of industrial justice.” United Steelworkers of Am. v. Enter. Wheel & Car Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 597 (1960).

For these reasons, I respectfully dissent.

I.

Judicial review of an arbitration award can be boiled down to a two-step process. Both inquiries follow from the fundamental premise that “arbitration is a matter of contract.” United Steelworkers of Am. v. Warrior & Gulf Nav. Co., 363 U.S. 574, 582 (1960). In the first step, the reviewing court asks whether the

1 arbitrator acted within the scope of his authority under the relevant collective 2 bargaining agreement. See Local 1199, Drug, Hosp. & Health Care Emp. Union,
 3 RWDSU, AFL-CIO v. Brooks Drug Co., 956 F.2d 22, 25 (2d Cir. 1992). This ensures 4 that a party is not forced “to submit to arbitration any dispute which he has not 5 agreed so to submit.” Warrior & Gulf Nav. Co., 363 U.S. at 582. If the arbitrator 6 acted within the scope of his authority, then his decision is entitled to substantial 7 deference. The award will be upheld so long as the reviewing court finds, at the 8 second step, that the arbitral award “draws its essence from the agreement” and 9 does not reflect “merely an example of the arbitrator’s own brand of justice.”
 10 Brooks Drug Co., 956 F.2d at 25. This guarantees that the parties get what they 11 bargained for, namely, the arbitrator’s construction of the CBA. Enter. Wheel &
 12 Car Corp., 363 U.S. at 599. In my opinion, the Commissioner’s decision fails as to 13 both steps.

14 II.

15 With regard to the first step, Article 46 of the CBA vests the Commissioner 16 with exceptional discretion to impose discipline for “conduct detrimental,” but it 17 checks that power by allowing the player to challenge that discipline through an 18 “appeal.” Joint App. at 345-46. In deciding the appeal, the arbitrator may decide 19 whether the misconduct charged actually occurred, whether it was actually 20 “detrimental” to the League, and whether the penalty imposed is permissible 21 under the CBA. But the arbitrator has no authority to base his decision on 22 misconduct different from that originally charged. When he does so, the 23 arbitrator goes beyond his limited authority, and the award should be vacated.

24 I would find that the Commissioner breached that limitation here. I 25 believe there are significant differences between the limited findings in the Wells 26 Report and the additional findings the Commissioner made for the first time in 27 his final written decision. The letter announcing Brady’s discipline explained 28 that his “actions as set forth in the [Wells Report] clearly constitute[d] conduct 29 detrimental to the integrity of and public confidence in the game of professional 30 football” and warranted a four-game suspension. Joint App. at 329-30. The Wells Report, in turn, concluded that it was “more probable than not that Tom Brady . . . was at least generally aware of the inappropriate activities of [Jim] McNally and [John] Jastremski involving the release of air from Patriots game balls,” Joint App. at 97, and that it was “unlikely” that McNally and Jastremski deflated the balls without Brady’s “knowledge,” “approval,” “awareness,” and “consent,” Joint App. at 114. The Commissioner’s final written decision, however, went further. It found that Brady “knew about, approved of, consented to, and provided inducements and rewards in support of a scheme by which, with Mr. Jastremski’s support, Mr. McNally tampered with the game balls.” Special App. at 51 (emphasis added).

Regardless of whether the difference between the Wells Report and the Commissioner’s decision constitutes a “quantum leap,” Maj. Op. at 21, I am convinced that the change was material. The misconduct found in the Wells Report is indisputably less culpable than inducing and rewarding cheating through the payment of memorabilia, as was found in the Commissioner’s final decision.

The majority takes the view that the Wells Report’s conclusions clearly encompassed a finding that Brady induced and rewarded the deflation of footballs. To the contrary, although the Wells Report described evidence that Brady provided both McNally and Jastremski with gifts and that McNally joked about demanding cash and other memorabilia, it never concluded that it was “more probable than not” that the gifts Brady provided were intended as rewards or advance payment for deflating footballs in violation of League rules. That stands in stark contrast to the Wells Report’s clear conclusions, by a preponderance of the evidence, regarding Brady’s “knowledge,” “approval,” “awareness,” and “consent.” Fairly read, the Wells Report did not put Brady on notice that he was found to have engaged in a quid pro quo.¹

¹ The majority also suggests that the Association never raised this issue. Although not every detail I mention is found in the Association’s brief, the concern is not of my own making. See Br. for Appellees Nat’l Football League Players Ass’n and Tom Brady at 49 (“Hoping to compensate for the Wells Report’s limited findings concerning Brady’s state of mind, Goodell pulled his ‘participat[ion]’ and ‘inducement[.]’

I would also find that Brady was prejudiced by the change in the Commissioner's rationale and the resulting lack of notice. The Association, in light of the lack of any clear finding in the Wells Report as to the purpose of the gifts, paid almost no attention to Brady's gift-giving during the appeal hearing. To support Brady's argument that he had no relationship with McNally, counsel for the Association asked Brady on direct examination whether he ever provided gifts to people he did not know, and Brady's affirmative response was then used in his post-hearing brief only to establish that single point. See Dist. Ct. Dkt. No. 28-231 at 15 (Post-Hearing Br. of the NFLPA and Tom Brady) ("The only thing 'linking' [Brady and McNally] is that Brady purportedly signed memorabilia for McNally, but Brady testified that he naturally does not know the name of everyone for whom he signs memorabilia, and even Wells found that Brady never provided McNally any year-end gifts or bonuses that would suggest they had any relationship."). Beyond that, the gifts played no role in the Association's challenge to Brady's discipline: the League did not ask Brady about gifts to McNally on cross-examination, and neither side asked Brady about any gifts he provided to Jastremski.

The Association's silence on this issue, however, seems to me to reflect only the lack of notice, not the lack of an available argument or a tactical decision to focus on other issues. The Wells Report found that McNally referred to himself as "the deflator" and threatened (perhaps jokingly) to go to ESPN as far back as May 2014, but it also credited McNally's statement that Brady never provided him with the same gifts doled out to other employees in the locker room.² The suggestion that McNally did not receive gifts from Brady even language from thin air."). Indeed, the majority addresses the Association's challenge to the Commissioner's shift to a finding of "participation," and in my view, the Commissioner's decision uses "participation" to refer to not only Brady's knowledge and approval of the scheme, but also his use of inducements and rewards. The Association's failure to fully flesh out this argument is, I suspect, a consequence of the district court never having reached the issue, see Nat'l Football League Mgmt. Council v. Nat'l Football League Players Assn., 125 F. Supp. 3d 449, 474 (S.D.N.Y. 2015), and the majority's decision (with which I do not quarrel) to reject the Association's request to remand on this issue.

² For example, the Wells Report stated the following regarding texts from McNally demanding tickets to a game between the Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers and new Uggs shoes:

1 during the period in which McNally sent suspicious text messages is further
2 corroborated by an October 2014 text message in which Jastremski told McNally
3 that Brady “gives u nothing.” Joint App. at 101. Finally, it appears undisputed
4 in the Wells Report that Brady provided gifts to other locker room attendants
5 who have not been implicated in the deflation (or any other) scheme. Brady’s 6 gift-giving, in other words, was not necessarily indicative of illicit behavior.

7 None of this is to say that the inferences that the Commissioner drew from 8 the evidence presented in the Wells Report constituted reversible error on their 9 own. But the foregoing demonstrates that the Association would have been able 10 to offer a meaningful challenge to the Commissioner’s conclusion (possibly 11 supported by additional new evidence regarding Brady’s practice of providing 12 gifts) had it been announced prior to the Article 46 appeal hearing. Taking the 13 Commissioner at his word that he “entered into the appeal process open to 14 reevaluating [his] assessment of Mr. Brady’s conduct and the associated 15 discipline,” Special App. at 60, I believe that, had Brady been provided an 16 opportunity to challenge the Commissioner’s conclusion on this score, the 17 outcome may have been different. The majority’s observation that the 18 Commissioner did not increase Brady’s punishment is beside the point. Had the 19 Commissioner confined himself to the misconduct originally charged, he may 20 have been persuaded to decrease the punishment initially handed down.

McNally described these texts as jokes, which we think is likely the case. Specifically, on December 5, 2014, the Boston Celtics were playing the Los Angeles Lakers in Boston and McNally had been asking Jastremski to get them tickets to a Celtics-Lakers game for years. McNally said the joke was that Brady should get them courtside seats for the game. With regard to the Uggs, McNally said that around the holidays each year Brady gives Uggs footwear to certain Patriots staff members, but that McNally has never received them. He explained that his message was a humorous response to a news report on Brady’s distribution of Uggs in 2014.

Joint App. at 183 (emphasis added).

Accordingly, I would find that the Commissioner exceeded his authority, to Brady's detriment, by resting Brady's discipline on factual findings not made in the Wells Report.³

III.

I would also find that the Commissioner's decision fails at the second step of our analysis because it does not draw its essence from the CBA. It must be emphasized that the case at hand involves an unprecedented punishment. Precisely because of the severity of the penalty, one would have expected the Commissioner to at least fully consider other alternative and collectively bargained-for penalties, even if he ultimately rejected them. Indeed, the CBA encourages—though, as the majority observes, does not strictly require—the Commissioner to fully explain his reasoning by mandating that he issue a written decision when resolving an Article 46 appeal. That process is all the more important when the disciplinary action is novel and the Commissioner's reasoning is, as here, far from obvious.

Yet, the Commissioner failed to even mention, let alone explain, a highly analogous penalty, an omission that underscores the peculiar nature of Brady's punishment. The League prohibits the use of stickum, a substance that enhances a player's grip. Under a collectively bargained-for Schedule of Fines, a violation of this prohibition warrants an $8,268 fine in the absence of aggravating circumstances. Given that both the use of stickum and the deflation of footballs involve attempts at improving one's grip and evading the referees' enforcement

³ The Commissioner's rationale also shifted insofar as he relied on new evidence regarding Brady's destruction of his cell phone to find that Brady "willfully obstructed" Wells's investigation. Special App. at 54. The majority persuasively demonstrates, however, that Brady anticipated this change and challenged it at the hearing and in his post-hearing brief. Thus, I agree that the Commissioner's reliance on this new evidence does not provide a ground to vacate the suspension. Cf. Duferco Int'l Steel Trading v. T. Klaveness Shipping A/S, 333 F.3d 383, 390 (2d Cir. 2003) ("We will, of course, not vacate an arbitral award for an erroneous application of the law if a proper application of law would have yielded the same result.").

1 of the rules,⁴ this would seem a natural starting point for assessing Brady's
 2 penalty. Indeed, the League's justification for prohibiting stickum—that it 3 “affects the integrity of the competition and can give a team an unfair 4 advantage,” Joint App. at 384 (League Policies for Players)—is nearly identical to 5 the Commissioner's explanation for what he found problematic about the 6 deflation—that it “reflects an improper effort to secure a competitive advantage 7 in, and threatens the integrity of, the game,” Special App. at 57.⁵

8 Notwithstanding these parallels, the Commissioner ignored the stickum
 9 penalty entirely. This oversight leaves a noticeable void in the Commissioner's 10 decision,⁶ and in my opinion, the void is indicative of the award's overall failure 11 to draw its essence from the CBA. Even taking into account the special 12 circumstances here—that the alleged misconduct occurred during the AFC 13 Championship Game, that team employees assisted in the deflation, that a 14 deflated football arguably affects every play, and that Brady failed to cooperate 15 in the subsequent investigation—I am unable to understand why the 16 Commissioner thought the appropriate penalty was a four-game suspension and 17 the attendant four-game loss of pay, which, in Brady's case, is far more than

⁴ Just as the referees check the inflation level of the footballs before the start of the game, they check players for stickum “prior to the game and prior to the beginning of the second half.” Joint App. at 384.

⁵ Although the Commissioner reasoned that steroid use also has the same adverse effects on the League, the fact that numerous infractions may be said to compromise the integrity of the game and reflect an attempt to gain a competitive advantage serves only to render more problematic the Commissioner's selection of what appears to be the harshest potential comparator without any meaningful explanation. This is especially true since, for the reasons stated by the district court, the Commissioner's analogy to steroid use is flawed. See Nat'l Football League Mgmt. Council, 125 F. Supp. 3d at 465. In short, the Commissioner's reliance on the League's steroid policy seems to me to be nothing more than mere “noises of contract interpretation” to which we do not ordinarily defer. In re Marine Pollution Serv., Inc., 857 F.2d 91, 94 (2d Cir. 1988) (quoting Ethyl Corp. v. United Steelworkers, 768 F.2d 180, 187 (7th Cir. 1985)).

⁶ The omission is all the more troubling since the Association raised this point during the arbitration proceedings. See Dist. Ct. Dkt. No. 28-231 at 9 (Post-Hearing Br. of the NFLPA and Tom Brady) (“The Player Policies further illustrate the disparate nature of any player suspension for an alleged competitive infraction, let alone for just being ‘generally aware’ of one. They identify player punishments for equipment violations that ‘affect[] the integrity of the competition and can give a team an unfair advantage’—such as putting stickum on receiver gloves . . . —and subject first-time player offenders to a fine of $8,268 for a specified violation.”).

$8,268. The lack of any meaningful explanation in the Commissioner's final written decision convinces me that the Commissioner was doling out his own brand of industrial justice. Cf. Burns Int'l Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Int'l Union, United Plant Guard Workers of Am. (UPGWA) & Its Local 537, 47 F.3d 14, 17 (2d Cir. 1995) ("[I]f a ground for the arbitrator's decision can be inferred from the facts of the case, the award should be confirmed." (quoting Sobel v. Hertz, Warner & Co., 469 F.2d 1211, 1216 (2d Cir. 1972)) (emphasis added). In this regard, it bears noting that the Schedule of Fines provides that a player caught violating the prohibition on stickum a second time is to be fined $16,537. Thus, even where aggravating circumstances exist, the Schedule of Fines does not provide for the extreme increase in penalty that the Commissioner found appropriate here.⁷

In sum, the Commissioner's failure to discuss the penalty for violations of the prohibition on stickum, the Commissioner's strained reliance on the penalty for violations of the League's steroid policy, and the Commissioner's shifting rationale for Brady's discipline, together, leave me with the firm conviction that his decision in the arbitration appeal was based not on his interpretation of the CBA, but on "his own brand of industrial justice." Enter. Wheel & Car Corp., 363 U.S. at 597.

IV.

The Commissioner's authority is, as the majority emphasizes, broad. But it is not limitless, and its boundaries are defined by the CBA. Here, the CBA grants the Commissioner in his capacity as arbitrator only the authority to decide

⁷ The majority again gives me too much credit in stating that the Association did not raise this argument. I read the Association's brief to make two arguments with respect to alternative penalties. The first is that the Player Policies, and in particular the "Other Uniform/Equipment Violations" provision, governed Brady's misconduct here and necessitates that he receive no more than a fine. I agree with the majority that this has no merit. The second, however, is that the Commissioner's failure to discuss certain probative terms—in particular, the "Other Uniform/Equipment Violations" provision and the stickum prohibition (obviously, I find only the latter actually probative)—reflects that the Commissioner was not actually construing the CBA, the only limitation imposed on an arbitrator acting within the scope of his authority. And, as the majority acknowledges, in support of that argument, the Association contends that the Commissioner's "CBA defiance is only underscored by his reliance on the Steroid Policy." Br. for Appellees Nat'l Football League Players Ass'n and Tom Brady at 45.

1 “appeals,” that is, whether the initial disciplinary decision was erroneous. The 2 Commissioner exceeded that limited authority when he decided instead that 3 Brady could be suspended for four games based on misconduct found for the 4 first time in the Commissioner’s decision. This breach of the limits on the 5 Commissioner’s authority is exacerbated by the unprecedented and virtually 6 unexplained nature of the penalty imposed. Confirming the arbitral award 7 under such circumstances neither enforces the intent of the parties nor furthers 8 the “federal policy that federal courts should enforce [arbitration] agreements . . .
9 and that industrial peace can be best obtained only in that way.” Textile Workers
10 Union of Am. v. Lincoln Mills of Ala., 353 U.S. 448, 455 (1957).

11 I end where I began. The Article 46 appeals process is designed to provide 12 a check against the Commissioner’s otherwise unfettered authority to impose 13 discipline for “conduct detrimental.” But the Commissioner’s murky 14 explanation of Brady’s discipline undercuts the protections for which the NFLPA 15 bargained on Brady’s, and others’, behalf. It is ironic that a process designed to 16 ensure fairness to all players has been used unfairly against one player.

17 I respectfully dissent.